BUSINESS VENTURES

Wyc was born and raised in Boston and attended Princeton University, University of Michigan Law School, and Stanford Business School. He was a venture capital investor for 7 years before he conceived of the idea to buy the Boston Celtics and led the acquisition in 2002. He has been Lead Owner, Governor and CEO of the Celtics ever since, as the Celtics won their historic 17th and 18th championships in 2008 and 2024. The Celtics' success on the court is matched in the community, as they help over 1,600 charities a year through the Boston Celtics Shamrock Foundation.

Wyc continued his investing career as well, co-founding Causeway Partners in 2013. Causeway has raised three venture growth funds totaling over $400 million and has invested in a number of successful sports-related businesses, including SeatGeek and most recently the recapitalization of golf's PGA Tour.

Together with his wife Emilia Fazzalari, Wyc co-founded award-winning Cincoro Tequila in 2016 with Jeanie Buss (owner, LA Lakers), Wes Edens (owner, Milwaukee Bucks), and Michael Jordan (NBA icon). It can currently be seen on NBC's Peacock. Wyc is an avid musician and plays guitar and drums in two bands. He has shared musical bills with such artists as Billy Idol, Lenny Kravitz, Gregg Allman and the J. Geils Band.

In 2010 Wyc became Chairman of the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, a teaching hospital of Harvard Medical School. It has been a world leader in vision and hearing research, fighting blindness and deafness, for almost 200 years.

ROSTER BREAKDOWN

BY TAYLOR SNOW

THE BALL HANDLERS

The ball-handling position is arguably the most important role on the basketball court, responsible for facilitating the offense and controlling the pace. Several Celtics are capable of handling the ball; however, there are four players in particular who specialize in the role.

JRUE HOLIDAY

The term “ball handler” doesn’t fully encapsulate Jrue Holiday’s impact on the Celtics. The 15-year veteran handles the ball at a high level and defends the ball better than maybe any perimeter player in the NBA.

Holiday’s addition right before the start of last season was an unexpected gift for an already-stacked contender. His facilitation, defensive ability, and willingness to sacrifice his personal production helped push the Celtics over the top to a championship.

During his first season in green, Holiday averaged 12.5 points, 4.8 assists, and a career-high 5.4 rebounds per game to go along with a career-best and team-leading 3-point clip of 42.9 percent. His defensive impact earned him his sixth career All-Defensive Team nod.

When Holiday arrived last fall, he said he could envision winning “multiple rings” in Boston. Expect the 34-year-old point guard to come out hungry to repeat this coming campaign.

DERRICK WHITE

One would have thought that inserting Holiday into the rotation would have caused Derrick White's stats to drop last season. Instead, the opposite occurred. Rather than stepping on each other's shoes, the duo complemented each other perfectly, and White posted career-high marks nearly across the board.

The seven-year vet posted 15.2 points, 5.2 assists, 4.2 rebounds, 1.0 steals, and 1.2 blocks per game while shooting 46.1 percent from the field, 39.6 percent from long range, and 90.1 percent from the free-throw line.

White's shot-blocking and ball-hawking skills earned him a spot alongside Holiday on the All-Defense Second Team, and he was a borderline All-Star.

The duo got even more reps alongside each other this summer, winning a gold medal with the U.S. Olympic team. So, their chemistry should be even stronger as they embark on their second season together.

PAYTON PRITCHARD

Payton Pritchard's minutes decreased from his rookie year to his sophomore year to his third year in the league, but he didn't let that discourage him. He came out for Year 4 last season with an opportunity to help fill the voids of Marcus Smart and Malcolm Brogdon, and he turned up the dial for a breakout campaign.

Pritchard saw an increase of nine minutes per game from his third year (13.4) to his fourth year (22.3), which resulted in career-high marks of 9.6 points, 3.4 assists, and 3.2 rebounds per game with shooting splits of 46.8 percent from the field, 38.5 percent from deep, and 82.1 percent from the charity stripe.

Not often do you see a third option with confidence like Pritchard has displayed. He was fearless in his shot-taking, especially in the playoffs. He knocked down the most memorable shot of the entire championship run – a halfcourt buzzer-beater at the end of the first half of a title-clinching Game 5, which sucked the life out of the Dallas Mavericks.

Combining such confidence with his per-minute production would make Pritchard a starting-caliber player on several teams. The Celtics are fortunate to have such a talent quarterbacking their bench unit.

JD DAVISON

JD Davison will enter his third season as a two-way player in the Celtics organization, splitting his time between Maine and Boston.

The 22-year-old may not have extensive big-game experience at the NBA level, but he does at the G League level, where he helped lead the Maine Celtics to the championship round this past spring.

He was the top all-around player on the Portland squad, averaging 20.8 points, 8.6 assists, 5.2 rebounds, and 1.6 steals per game, which earned him All-NBA G League Third Team honors.

Davison has shown strides in each of his three professional seasons, and that's why the Celtics continue to believe in the uber-athletic guard. His fourth season will be his most important yet – to show that he belongs in the NBA full-time.

THE WINGS

Wings are often the most versatile players on the floor and are relied upon to take on a heavy scoring load. Defensively, they'll typically be tasked with suppressing elite scorers on opposing teams. Depending on their skill set, they may also be assigned ball-handling duties, or they may slide into the frontcourt to take on opposing bigs. The Celtics have seven players who will be taking on that role this season.

JAYSON TATUM

Jayson Tatum has made a case to be the most well-rounded wing in the NBA. At the very least, he has one of the more impressive resumes: five straight All-Star appearances, four All-NBA nods, three consecutive top-six MVP finishes, and now an NBA championship under his belt.

attempted fewer than 20 shots per game, showing his willingness to sacrifice for the team. But that didn't prevent him from logging his fourth straight season of at least 26 points per game. He focused more on distribution, handing out a career-best 4.9 assists per game, and helped to clean the glass with a team-high 8.1 rebounds per game. The 26-year-old logged his best field-goal percentage (47.1 percent) since his rookie season and his best 3-point clip (37.6 percent) since the 2020-21 campaign.

Tatum has hardly slowed down since winning his first championship. Not long after the parade, he joined Team USA in Paris where he earned his second Olympic gold medal.

That championship wouldn't have been possible if Tatum hadn't led by example, emphasizing team needs over individual. For the first time since 2019-20, Tatum

That means there won't be much rust to shake off as he enters Season 8.

JAYLEN BROWN

Only one player has been with the Celtics longer than Tatum, and that's his wing-mate, Jaylen Brown.

Brown just wrapped up his eighth season, and it was by far his most impressive year yet. Not only was he an All-Star for the third time, but he also spearheaded the championship run, winning both the Eastern Conference Finals MVP and the NBA Finals MVP.

JB experienced similar statistical trends to Tatum in several ways. His shooting attempts dipped, but his efficiency rose to a career-best 49.9 percent while also posting a career-high 3.6 assists per game. In the playoffs, his shooting percentage rose to 51.6 percent, including a stellar 60.7 percent from inside the 3-point arc.

The only mission that Brown failed to accomplish was making it to the All-Defensive team, even though he had by far the best season of his career on that end of the floor. That'll just add another chip to his shoulder heading into Season 9, where he'll look to turn up the intensity even more defensively.

SAM HAUSER

In a matter of three years, Sam Hauser went from being an undrafted free agent to Tatum made more (229 3-point makes), but JT also played nearly 1,000 more minutes.

Hauser's 150 makes off the bench were the second-most all-time by a Celtics reserve, just one shy of Eddie House's 151 in 2008-09.

However, Hauser has proven to be more than just a 3-point shooter; he's also stepped up on the other end of the floor and was tabbed by Joe Mazzulla as one of the more underrated defensive players on the team.

becoming a key cog off the bench for a championship team.

Hauser was undoubtedly the best high-volume 3-point shooter on the team last season, finishing with 197 makes on 465 attempts (42.4 percent). Only Jayson

Hauser has added to his game each season, so it'll be exciting to see what he has in store for Year 4.

JORDAN WALSH

Jordan Walsh got his first small taste of NBA life last season, appearing in 12 regular season and playoff games. Most of his time was spent developing in the G League, where the 20-year-old averaged 14.4 points, 5.6 rebounds, 2.1 assists, and 1.5 steals per game with the Maine Celtics.

Walsh is a beast on the defensive end, using his 7-foot-3 wingspan to get deflections and steals. He's certainly NBA-ready on that end. However, he still has some work to do on the offensive end as he continues to work on his shooting.

As the youngest player on the roster, Walsh has a bit of developing to do before he carves out a significant NBA role. But he should earn more minutes in Year 2 after having another offseason and Summer League under his belt.

JADEN SPRINGER

The title of second-youngest player on the roster belongs to Jaden Springer, an under-the-radar trade deadline acquisition from last season.

Springer came to Boston via Philly in mid-February and saw limited minutes at the wing spot. He, too, impressed on the defensive end, and although he doesn't have nearly the wingspan that Walsh possesses, he's still capable of wreaking havoc on that end with his tenacious on-ball defense.

Springer is one of the more athletic players on the roster, but the 22-year-old still has some other areas to improve on before carving out a consistent role. Still, he's capable of providing energy off the bench, whether it's with his defense or acrobatic dunks.

DREW PETERSON

Drew Peterson joined the Celtics last December on a two-way contract, and he'll be back on another two-way deal this season.

Peterson fits a similar mold as Hauser, as an undrafted wing who has developed into a solid shooter, passer, and defender. He's not quite the shooter that Hauser is but is a bit more of a playmaker.

Last season with the Maine Celtics, Peterson averaged 16.1 points, 7.3 rebounds, and 5.8 assists per game. He only played 23 minutes for Boston, though he took advantage of his limited opportunity by scoring 11 points on 4-of-6 shooting from the field, including 3-of-5 from long range.

Expect to see Peterson in a similar type of role this season, playing a significant role with Maine while providing depth for Boston if needed.

BAYLOR SCHEIERMAN

Baylor Scheierman was about as well-rounded of a wing that was available in this year's NBA Draft, and the Celtics snagged him with pick No. 30.

The 6-foot-6 Nebraska native played five college seasons between South Dakota State and Creighton and became the first player in Division I men's history to amass at least 2,000 points, 1,000 rebounds, 500 assists, and 300 3-pointers.

At age 24, Scheierman is one of the older rookies in his class. But that also makes him one of the more experienced rookies in his class, one who may not need as long to develop. He brings a hardworking mentality to the court, which was on display in Summer League, so we'll see if he can use that to help work his way up the depth chart.

THE BIGS

As their title indicates, the bigs are the largest players on the floor. They're responsible for banging bodies in the post, protecting the rim, and using their high vantage points to communicate to the defense. The Celtics have six players who share this role.

KRISTAPS PORZINGIS

The only major difference in the Celtics' rotation is that there will be a 7-foot-2 void in the tip-off circle at the start of the season. It was announced in late June that Kristaps Porzingis would be sidelined for five to six months after undergoing surgery to repair a torn retinaculum and dislocated posterior tibialis tendon, putting his estimated return date somewhere between late November and late December.

In the three months since his operation, Porzingis has been rehabbing back home in Latvia. He'll continue his work back in Boston during Training Camp and the beginning of the regular season. If he can return sometime in December, it would provide an excellent quarter-season pick-me-up for the Celtics.

Last season he thrived as Boston's third scoring option behind the Jays, averaging 20.1 points per game on a career-high 51.6 percent shooting from the field. He was also their top shot-blocker at 1.9 swats per game.

The C's proved they could still win without KP during the 2024 playoffs. But there's no question they are a far more formidable team when he is in the lineup, thanks to his interior presence on both ends.

The C's will miss his presence for the first month or two, but the rest of the guys on this list should have no problem stepping up as they've done in the past.

AL HORFORD

Al Horford played a huge part in filling in for Porzingis during the playoffs last spring, and he'll enter Year 18 doing the same.

The five-time All-Star was at the forefront of the team's "Whatever It Takes" mindset last season, accepting and embracing a bench role for the first time in his career because he knew that's what the team needed from him to reach its maximum potential. At the start of this season, he'll likely be elevated back into the starting center role until KP gets back.

Horford started 15 of 19 playoff games in the postseason, averaging 9.2 points, 7.0 rebounds, 2.1 assists per game, and 30 minutes per game. He shot 47.8 percent from the field, including 36.8 percent from outside the arc and a league-high 72.1 percent from inside the arc. Not bad for a guy who, in the middle of that run, turned 38 years old.

Horford has shown that he is timeless and still has plenty of basketball left in the tank. He'll need to tap into his fuel reserve early in the season as he steps back into a starting role.

LUKE KORNET

In a matter of two years, Luke Kornet went from being nearly out of the league to the backup center for a championship team.

What a journey it has been.

Kornet had the most impactful season of his career last season, averaging 5.3 points and 4.1 rebounds per game, while playing in 76 total games, including seven spot starts.

The 7-foot-2 center is extraordinarily efficient whenever he's on the floor. Last season he shot 70 percent from the field and 90.7 percent from the free throw line. He also made his only 3-point attempt of the season, technically making him the only player in NBA history to finish a campaign with 70/100/90 splits. He was also the only player in the league to rank among the top five in both contested twos and threes per 36 minutes.

Expect some big minutes from Kornet throughout this season, not only during Porzingis' absence but also later in the campaign when the team is managing KP and Horford's minutes leading up to the playoffs.

XAVIER TILLMAN SR.

The Celtics didn't have to do much at last season's trade deadline, but one of the beneficial tweaks they made was dealing for Xavier Tillman Sr.

The 25-year-old power forward/center provided valuable frontcourt depth down the final stretch of the regular season. He also hit one of the timeliest shots in the Finals when he knocked down a key 3-pointer during Boston's Game 3 rally against the Mavericks.

In re-signing Tillman over the summer, the C's retain a tough veteran, a skilled passer, and a versatile defender who can provide strong pick-and-roll defense and rim protection.

NEEMIAS QUETA

While playing on a two-way contract last season, Neemias Queta impressed the Celtics' front office brass so much that they opted to sign him to a full-time deal over the summer.

Queta dominated during his time in the G League where he was a double-double machine and a shot-blocking nightmare for Maine. The 7-foot lob threat also took advantage of every opportunity during his 28 regular-season appearances for Boston, with per-36 averages of 16.6 points, 13.2 rebounds, 2.2 assists, 2.3 blocks, and 1.4 steals.

Queta should have even more time to shine in the NBA this season, so get ready for some high-flying dunks and electrifying blocks whenever he takes the floor.

ANTON WATSON

The only addition to Boston's frontcourt is second-round draft pick Anton Watson. The 6-foot-8 rookie is somewhat of an exception on this list because he is a tweener who can slot in as either a big or a wing. He played a lot of small forward at Gonzaga, but he also has a strong interior skill set on both ends of the floor and said he strives for an Al Horford-type role.

Watson is an excellent ball hawk, ranking second on the Bulldogs' all-time steals list behind the NBA's steal king John Stockton. On the other end, he has the potential to be a 3-point threat. He shot 41.2 percent from deep during his senior season and has been implored by Brad Stevens to let the ball fly.

Watson is one of three Celtics on a two-way contract this season, so we'll see him suit up both in Boston and in Maine throughout his rookie campaign.

AFTER CAPTURING BANNER 18

BOSTON'S HUNGER FOR NEXT TITLE IS EVEN STRONGER

BY TAYLOR SNOW

BOSTON – Jayson Tatum's hunger for Banner 18 has been satiated. But his hunger for the next banner is stronger than ever.

The satisfaction of finally getting over the hump and capturing his first championship has been replaced by a yearning to experience it all over again.

Because that's what legends do: they grind, they win, they celebrate. And they repeat that process for as long as their bodies and minds allow.

"It was never about trying to just win one,"

Tatum said before the start of Training Camp. "Now you get to at least be in the same room with the other Celtics great teams, great players. All the guys I looked up to growing up won at least one championship. Now it's just a conversation of how great are you trying to be? What room or what tier are you trying to be mentioned in when it's all said and done?"

It's not just Tatum who feels that way. It's the entire team. And that's part of the reason why Brad Stevens is running it back with 13 of the 15 guys from last year's championship roster.

The President of Basketball Operations said, "I generally wouldn't mind a tweak or two just because I think that those things can galvanize you, can give you a jolt, can give you the juice that you need. But I think that these guys are galvanized by each other ... They have a unique chemistry that I truly believe matters. And they deserve the opportunity to attack this challenge together."

Jaylen Brown agrees that there is a unique chemistry with this group, one that he hadn't experienced in his previous seven seasons with the team. The longest-tenured Celtic believes that this isn't the type of chemistry that you want to alter, because this team knows how to win together and they love to win together.

"We've got a stellar group of guys – guys that just have great mentalities, so I don't think it will be as hard to maintain that consistency," Brown said. "We just gotta make sure that we continue to emphasize and hold each other accountable ... I'm looking forward to this journey because of the guys I get to share the locker room with."

They also have to be realistic, knowing that the journey won't come without ups and downs. Even last year's 80-win team had some bumps here and there, but they never lost their competitive edge whenever adversity hit.

"We won't always be perfect," said Stevens. "I'm sure we'll get drilled in a game early this season and I'm sure we'll have our moments where we play really well. But the question is how can we stay consistent and are we about the things that we embraced last year to get there? Do we sacrifice for one another? Are we willing to take everybody's best shot? Do we look at it as a fun challenge? For me, this is as good of a challenge as you get if you're a competitor. So we should be excited about it."

Perhaps no one is more excited for the challenge than his head coach. Joe Mazzulla has often said how winning is just as dangerous as losing, and this is the first time he'll see how this team approaches coming off a fully successful season.

"I think being in a situation like this tests why you do what you do, because you can't only do it for the good times," said Mazzulla. "I think when you go through an experience like last year, it really just tests your internal motivation. And if you're going to be externally motivated, that's going to die out and you'll kind of be exposed for your external motivation relatively quick. But I think going through successes and failures kind of tests your internal, intrinsic motivation as to what you're really going after."

They've gone after the same goal year after year, and this season is no different. But it feels different now that they understand what it's like to achieve their goal. And that just makes them hungrier.

"It does feel different being here as a champion," Tatum said. "Just knowing what it takes and wanting to be on the top of the mountain as many times as you can."

WHITE HONORED TO BE RECOGNIZED

WITH COMMUNITY CHAMPION AWARD

BY TAYLOR SNOW

BOSTON – Just before the start of the season, Derrick White added to his champion resume – this time for his contributions off the court.

The 2024 NBA champ was recognized for his service in the Greater Boston Community, earning the 2024 Community Champion Award, which was presented to him at the Celtics' annual Shamrock Foundation Tip-Off Gala.

The award is presented to a Celtics player who extends the reach of the organization's championship legacy into the community through contributions that directly benefit kids in need.

"It was very cool to be honored like that," White reflected. "The community is what it's all about and just trying to give back to the community, give back to the people less fortunate, and just trying to celebrate the successes that they have. So it's a great honor to win it and I'm just glad I can do stuff in this community."

White has been active in the Boston community ever since he stepped foot into the city two and a half years ago. He's both spearheaded and participated in several events involving local youths and families, including a handful of programs this past year.

In February of 2024, White hosted a bowling event to help raise funds to support Special Olympics MA. He has been an avid supporter of Special Olympics athletes for his whole life, drawing inspiration from his aunt who competed in the Special Olympics for more than 30 years.

Fittingly, three Special Olympic athletes presented White with his award Friday night and then participated with him, Jaylen Brown, and Jayson Tatum in a friendly Pop-A-Shot competition.

The trophy itself is gargantuan, made of wood with White's green No. 9 on top.

"It's going to be interesting what we're going to do with it," he said with a smile. "But that's not my job. I'll let wifey try to figure it out."

White also served as an ambassador for the Celtics' curbside Care Program, a mobile unit that delivers BMC Pediatrics and Midwifery services to mothers and babies outside of their homes. In March, he donated strollers and essential baby items to families in need and in even rode along in the mobile unit so that he could connect with patients.

Additionally, White participated in Boston Scientific's "Fit for a Cause" launch and Sun Life's "Fit to Win" program, both of which promote and embrace healthy lifestyle habits.

This is the second community-based award that White has earned this year. In April, he was the recipient of the Red Auerbach Award, given to the Celtics player or coach who best exemplifies the spirit of what it means to be a Celtic through exceptional performance on and off the court.

Jaylen Brown, the winner of both awards the previous year, said there is no one more deserving than White for these community honors. "It means a lot for Derrick to be recognized for who he is as a player, but for who he is as a person, as well."

Waving a home inspection can put you at risk.

A home inspection is a standard part of the home buying process. After a buyer's offer is accepted, the buyer hires a licensed professional who checks the wiring, flushes the toilets, peers into the attic and tests the heating and air conditioning systems (and much more).

Under normal circumstances, you would never want to waive a home inspection.

Having a home inspected before finalizing the purchase protects your financial interests, not to mention your safety.

What is a home inspection contingency?

This clause involves the window of time the buyer has to get the property professionally inspected. The home inspection helps ensure there are no serious issues, such as a leaky roof, a faulty electrical system or structural defects.

You can sometimes waive the contingency, but still have the inspection.

In today's low-inventory market, some buyers may want to make their offers stand out by agreeing to ignore minor issues. But rather than skipping the inspection entirely, savvy bidders can modify the language in their offers.

Bottom line

The home inspection exists for your protection as a buyer. It can alert you to minor problems before they become major ones, and major problems before they become your problem.

Book your home inspection for peace of mind!

HelpCureHD aims to help improve the quality of life for those affected by Huntington's Disease by contributing financial, emotional, and mental support while trying to find the cure.

THE PROBLEM

There is no cure for Huntington's Disease. Currently, there is a 50/50 chance a child could inherit the disease if a parent has HD in their family line.

There is a way to stop the gene from being passed on, through in vitro fertilization, or IVF. A procedure that implants embryos that do not have the HD gene can cost upwards of $25,000 - $30,000. This treatment is the only way parents who are at risk can guarantee their biological child will be HD-free.

OUR GOALS

- Provide the finances for families who are at-risk and in financial need and are willing to undergo IVF in order to stop the HD gene from being passed on in their family line.
- Our broader focus is to continue developing partnerships with fertility clinics across the country and raising funds to help cover these costs for many more families.
- HelpCureHD has already awarded 136 families through its grant program, which means Huntington's Disease will be eradicated from dozens of family lines FOREVER. HCHD has welcomed dozens of healthy babies already born, and many on the way!

TD GARDEN

TD Garden, owned and operated by Delaware North, first opened its doors to the public on September 30, 1995. Located in the heart of the City of Boston and convenient by public transportation, TD Garden is an attractive destination for locals and Boston visitors alike.

In the 20 plus years since its opening, New England's premiere sports and entertainment arena hosts approximately 3.5 million people and 200 events annually. It is the proud home of the NHL's Boston Bruins, an original six franchise, and the NBA's storied Boston Celtics. Thanks to these high-profile tenants, TD Garden's rafters house more championship banners than any other professional sports arena in the country.

In addition to world-renowned concerts, sporting events, family shows, wrestling, and ice shows, the arena has played host to countless marquee events, including the Democratic National Convention, NHL All-Star Game, NCAA Frozen Fours, NCAA Women's Final Four, U.S. Gymnastics Olympic Trials, U.S. Figure Skating Championships and ISU World Figure Skating Championships, among others. TD Garden is proud to continue to attract these types of high caliber events to Boston and, in turn, generate more than $365 million in direct economic impact to the Greater Boston region over the last 20 years.

TD Garden's parent company, Delaware North, continues to be committed to reinvesting in TD Garden and making the arena the high watermark for best in class arenas in both experience and service. In 2018, Charlie Jacobs, CEO of Delaware North's Boston Holdings, along with TD Garden president Amy Latimer, announced a massive expansion of the 23-year-old arena taking place over the next two years. The $100 million private investment will provide a combined 50,000 square feet of additional space on all levels of the building and marks the 'Legendary Transformation' of TD Garden and the fan experience for generations to come.

Along with the addition of new space, comes the opportunity to introduce a new brand and a redefinition of The Premium Club, now known as 'Boston Garden Society' – Boston's newest oldest sports and social club. Boston Garden Society is a commitment to a new tradition of sports and entertainment for the Boston business community and beyond, coming in the form of transformed spaces as well as upgraded amenities and experiences over the next few years.

Extending the guest experience beyond the four walls of TD Garden is paramount to it its leadership, which is why Delaware North and Boston Properties broke ground on a joint venture project called The Hub on Causeway in 2016. The Hub on Causeway a 1.5 million square foot mixed-use project that is being constructed on the 2.5-acre site of the original Boston Garden. This transit-oriented development, featuring retail, office space, hotel, and residential building, is a significant investment that will bring substantial improvements to North Station, create major economic impact for the area and strengthen the viability of this important district in the City of Boston.

TD Garden's all-new, state of the art digital marquee on the exterior of the arena solidifies its place as the 'gateway' to the City. The digital marquee is a 3,000 square foot LED screen that is integrated with the arena's pre-existing exterior lighting elements and providing the public with real time game updates, upcoming event notifications, and amplifies community initiatives that are supported by Garden Neighborhood Charities, TD Garden's philanthropic arm.

Delaware North, owner and operator of TD Garden, is one of the largest privately-held hospitality and food service companies in the world. Founded in 1915 and owned by the Jacobs family for more than 100 years, Delaware North has global operations at high-profile places such as sports and entertainment venues, national and state parks, destination resorts and restaurants, airports, and regional casinos.

“ For a man who does not value freedom for himself will never value it for others or put himself to any inconvenience to gain it for others.”

– FREDERICK DOUGLASS

THE FIGHT FOR HISTORY HAPPENED THERE.

The Boston African Meeting House was not only a historic spiritual and religious center but also a gathering place for education, culture, and politics.

HISTORY WAS MADE THERE.

The Massachusetts General Colored Association, dedicated to ending slavery and discrimination in America, met there. Abolitionists William Lloyd Garrison, Frederick Douglass, and Maria Stewart spoke there. William Lloyd Garrison founded the New England Anti-Slavery Society there. The New England Freedom Association assisted runaway slaves on the Underground Railroad there. The community celebrated the end of the international slave trade there.

One of the first African American Civil War regiments, the Massachusetts 54th Volunteer Regiment, was recruited there.
